The Glens Falls Feeder Canal Trail is a 9-mile trail through Glens Falls, New York. The town is just south of the entrance to the Adirondack Park and Lake George.

About the Route

The Glens Falls Feeder Canal Trail begins at the Feeder Dam in Glens Falls and follows the Hudson River through town to the Champlain Canal, then turns south toward Fort Edward. The 9-mile trail follows a portion of one of New York's few remaining sections of the original 1820s canal system. There is one short on-road segment (1 mile) through Glens Falls that goes around the paper mill.

Connections

In Glens Falls, trail users can connect to the Warren County Bikeway.

The Glens Falls Feeder Canal Trail is part of the developing 77-mile Champlain Canalway Trail, which will stretch from Waterford to Whitehall. Additionally, the Champlain Canalway Trail is part of the state-spanning Empire State Trail, which is under active development and will encompass 750 miles when complete.
