South Adams Trail

Introduction The South Adams Trail, sometimes referred to as the Berne-Geneva Trail carries trail users for just over two miles. The railroad bridge, constructed by Carnegie Steel in 1897 still carries trail users to this day. At the southern end of the trail, the Ceylon Covered Bridge, constructed in 1860 is a scenic spot and is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

About the Route

Starting at the trail's northern endpoint at W 850 S, the trail heads south and crosses over the Wabash River via an impressive restored railroad bridge. After about 0.5 miles, a spur trail heads east near the Snow Cemetery, where the original European settlers of the area are buried.

This spur meanders east for almost one mile and switches from asphalt to dirt surface near the eastern trailhead. Here's where trail users can find the historic Claycomb Covered Bridge.

The rest of the main route continues south for about another mile before reaching an abrupt end near North Dr and Rainbow Rd.

Introduction

The South Adams Trail, sometimes referred to as the Berne-Geneva Trail carries trail users for just over two miles. The trail one day aims to connect the towns of Berne and Geneva just south of Fort Wayne.

Trail History

The South Adams Trail was built along the route of the former Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad. This line was a passenger railroad that connects passengers to Mackinaw City, MI and Cincinnati, OH through Indiana. It was active before the civil war but was abandoned in 1967.

Many historic pieces of this railroad still remain. An old
