Once used by the Seneca indians, this trail traverses glacial formations, open fields, farmland, wooded wetlands and the Auburn Trail. The degree of difficulty varies from flat and easy to steep and hilly. The trail can be wet and muddy in some sections.

Valentown Hall, located at the north end of the trail, is a three story wooden building that was built in the 1870's for a train that never came. The museum is open on weekends and by appointment. At the south end of the trail is Ganondagan State Historic Site, once a thriving Seneca village. Learn how the Seneca lived in this area in the 1600's and see a replica of a longhouse.
