Barton Creek Greenbelt is one of Austin's most popular trails, which runs for nearly 8 miles through Barton Creek Wilderness Park southwest of the city. The dirt trail, best suited for mountain bikes, is flanked in places with rock walls and follows the course of its namesake creek through lush greenery. At the east end, Zilker Park features dinosaurs hiding among the botanical gardens. In summer, take a plunge into a refreshing swimming hole. During high water in the spring, water tumbles over low fall.

From the Barton Creek Greenbelt, you can access footpaths into the hills but cyclists must remain on the main greenbelt corridor. The trail is open from 5 a.m. to 10 p.m.
