Redden State Forest Headquarters Loop Trail

Delaware

Redden State Forest, located just north of Georgetown in Sussex County, offers more than 44 miles of trails for hiking, mountain spot for meetings, family gatherings and other events.

Hunters use the state forest during hunting season (typically between fall and January 1st); if you are using the trail then, wear bright orange to be safe.

Maps of all the forest trails are available at the headquarters building.

Redden State Forest, located just north of Georgetown in Sussex County, offers more than 44 miles of trails for hiking, mountain biking, birdwatching and hunting on several thousand acres.

The most popular trail is a four-mile loop around the 1,836-acre Headquarters Tract. Visitors will find hardwood trees and loblolly pine as they explore this well-traveled trail. The trail cuts through dense woods, across bridges and through swamps and meadow areas. There are several smaller trails to explore off this main trail as well.

Redden Lodge is a historic highlight along this loop. Built in the early 20th century by the Pennsylvania Railroad, the lodge was used by railroad executives for conferences and hunting excursions. Now the structure is a popular
