Closely following its scenic namesake waterway for most of its journey, the popular Boulder Creek Path runs east from Boulder Canyon to the outskirts of the Valmont Reservoir. Its western end is dirt and gravel, which becomes paved as the trail enters the city and travels through downtown Boulder, community parks and the University of Colorado campus.

Trail connections can be made to the Goose Creek Greenway and South Boulder Creek Path near the Boulder Creek Path's eastern end, allowing for much longer journeys throughout the city and Boulder County.
