Pine Island Bike Path

Florida

Overview Pine Island Bike Path, also known as the Stringfellow Trail for the road it parallels, spans the length of the island on trails throughout to explore forests, marshes, and tidal swampland.

Further north, Phillips Park lies just west of the trail along Sesame Drive on the opposite side of Stringfellow Road. It offers recreational amenities, such as a playground, athletic facilities, and picnic tables.

The northern end of the trail is in Bokeelia, on the rural north end of the island, where the trail passes fruit tree orchards and groves of palm trees.

Trail users should carry water and snacks. The path is very flat, but there is no shade. Restrooms are limited, located at some of the conservation areas, in the marinas, and at the public library (10701 Russell Rd, Bokeelia).

Overview

Pine Island Bike Path, also known as the Stringfellow Trail for the road it parallels, spans the length of the island on Florida's southwest coast.

About the Route

The Pine Island Bike Path runs 14.3 miles between Bokeelia, at the island's northern tip, and St. James City, a residential waterfront community at the island's southern tip.

Heading north from the southern end in St. James City, the concrete path passes near the Pine Island Flatwoods Preserve. The preserve is worth a side trip with hiking
