Black Hill Trail

Maryland

Black Hill Trail offers a wooded trek with gentle inclines through Black Hill Regional Park in Boyds, Maryland, just outside of the entrance to the park's Crystal Rock Trail, which takes you a couple hundred yards west to where it joins the Black Hill Trail. This approach is shorter and closer to visitors coming from Washington, DC.

Black Hill Trail offers a wooded trek with gentle inclines through Black Hill Regional Park in Boyds, Maryland, just outside of Washington, DC. The trail is primarily paved, though a short section in the middle is unpaved and rocky.

A good place to begin your journey is at the park's visitor center, where you'll find parking, restrooms, picnic areas, and a fishing pier. From there, the trail winds through oak and hickory trees between Little Seneca Lake and Little Seneca Creek. Add to your adventure by renting a boat and following the water trail on the lake, or exploring one of the park's natural-surface trails for hiking, mountain biking, or horseback riding.

An alternative starting point is Crystal Rock Drive on the eastern side of the park. From the parking area, you'll see
