Crown Zellerbach Trail

Oregon

The Crown Zellerbach Trail, known locally as the Crown Z Trail or the CZ Trail, follows a former logging railroad through quiet and accessible only for its first 2 miles in the Scappoose area. The general grade of the eastern end of the trail is less than 5% percent for its first 11 miles heading west from Scappoose. From there, the maximum grade is 12% near Nehalem Divide and 20% near the Holce Trailhead in Vernonia on the western end of the trail.

Along the route, 34 kiosks explain the area's geology and wildlife, as well as provide historical information created by the Columbia County Museum Association with QR codes (where there is cell service) for additional content. Many of the trailheads (spaced roughly every 3–4 miles) also include restrooms, picnic tables and bike repair stations.

In Vernonia, the CZ Trail ends about a quarter mile from the paved Banks-Vernonia State Trail, which offers another 22 miles of scenic riding through wooded and rural landscapes.

The Crown Zellerbach Trail, known locally as the Crown Z Trail or the CZ Trail, follows a former logging railroad through quiet and picturesque forests in northwest Oregon. Its east end begins at Multnomah Channel and, from there, the trail continues for 25 miles on a northwest course largely paralleling the Scappoose-Vernonia Road from Scappoose to Vernonia. (Note that the last 4.2 miles of the route are on-road.)

In June 2023, Secretary of the Interior Deb Haaland designated the Crown Zellerbach Trail a National Recreation Trail in a celebration of National Trails Day.

Primarily packed gravel, the trail is suitable for walking, mountain biking and horseback riding, plus cross-country skiing in the winter. It is paved and wheelchair
