observation areas. The Trolley Line Trail is a perfect connection between two great family destinations, popular with locals and visitors alike.

Built on the same route that a streetcar once used to carry passengers to the impressive overlooks of Eagle Point Park, the half-mile long Trolley Line Trail provides a convenient and scenic means of accessing the park. The trail runs through a densely wooded landscape, ascending up towards the limestone bluffs that allow for gorgeous views of the Mississippi River right above the historic lock and dam that spans the section below. The southern end of the trail begins at the Mathias Ham Historic Site, a stately Victorian era manor that offers guided tours exploring the history of the Dubuque area and what life was like in the bygone steamboat era. The northern end of the trail brings you into Eagle Point Park, a 164-acre site that offers a whole host of outdoor recreational activities like picnicking and tennis, as well as incredible views of the mighty river from a series of lookout towers and
