Enchanted Hills Boulevard Trail

New Mexico

The Enchanted Hills Boulevard Trail, as its name suggests, hugs the northeast side of Enchanted Hills Boulevard for about three miles

Hills Path, creating a loose looping system of trails that covers much of this northern residential cluster. Offering a wide, largely flat pathway that provides way more accommodation than your typical sidewalk, the Enchanted Hills Boulevard Trail gives residents an off-road option for getting to shops and other destinations and a functional, if maybe not-so beautiful, recreation option.

The Enchanted Hills Boulevard Trail, as its name suggests, hugs the northeast side of Enchanted Hills Boulevard for about three miles in the northern reaches of Rio Rancho, a sprawling and growing suburb of Albuquerque. This sidepath trail provides a very useful alternative to the busy 40-mph road it parallels, allowing cyclists and pedestrians to get around with ease across a large stretch of the suburban area. Due to the roadside nature of the trail, there are a good many road crossings required, and the trail does not provide the most attractive surroundings - although it does pass right by the play areas and green space that constitutes Enchanted Hills Park along its route.

The northwestern end of the trail creates a link with the Chayote Trail, which in turn leads north to the Enchanted
