Androscoggin River Bicycle Path

Maine

Brunswick, Maine is home to the Androscoggin River Bicycle Trail, a multipurpose recreational trail nestled between the river and US it parallels busy Route 1, but despite the noise you will no doubt feel compelled to pause and take in views of the Androscoggin River. The trail reaches its eastern end along Grover Lane.

Connections

The Androscoggin River Bicycle Trail is part of the East Coast Greenway, a series of trails stretching from Maine to Florida.

Brunswick, Maine is home to the Androscoggin River Bicycle Trail, a multipurpose recreational trail nestled between the river and US Route 1. The trail stretches 2.6 miles from end-to-end.

About the Route

The trail leaves off in the west at the end of Water Street, at the parking for the nearby dog park. The boat landing on this end provides a glimpse of the river, spanned by a railroad bridge. The route heads east just a few steps away and features two lanes, one for pedestrians and one for cyclists. The trail passes a soccer field and is under SR 196. That brings you to Merrymeeting Dog Park, a large canine play area. Stone benches dot the riverside as the trail winds along the river's south bank. For most of its length,
