The Emory Valley Greenway is a paved path in Oak Ridge, Tennessee. The trail is open for walking, biking and other non-motorized uses. Much of the trail exists as a sidepath paralleling Emory Valley Road. However, it takes a wooded diversion between Columbia Drive and Briarcliff Avenue, and again at the east end of the trail, where it loops through a natural area beside a backwater of the Clinch River.

The recreation pathway also acts as a connector, a way for neighbors to access the Melton Lake Greenway, which stretches nearly six miles along the Clinch riverfront.
