The Milton Rail-Trail is a short, paved pathway in the small town of Milton, allowing local residents to get out and take a quick ride or walk along a flat, off-road corridor. The newest section of the trail was opened in June 2020, giving residents of the neighborhoods west of town a safe and easy means of heading east. While it may not offer enough mileage or scenery to warrant going out of your way, the rail-trail is a nice asset to the community and just one of many examples of Delaware's efforts to improve access to trails across the state.
