North Shore Parkway Multi-Use Trail

Mississippi

A sidepath trail that largely follows the route of its namesake roadway, the North Shore Parkway Multi-Use Trail helps provide along the route.

Past the park, bike lanes along the roadway and along the bridge can help carry cyclists across the bay to where the trail picks up again near Bridgepointe Boulevard, although note that there are no sidewalk accommodations for pedestrians. The trail intersects with another path that follows Fannin Landing Circle before continuing east along the northern shore of the bay along an uninterrupted and pleasantly shaded route, coming to an end at State Route 471 - more bike lanes are provided to the south, allowing cyclists to loop back around to the eastern end of the Spillway Road Trail.

A sidepath trail that largely follows the route of its namesake roadway, the North Shore Parkway Multi-Use Trail helps provide area cyclists and pedestrians with convenient access to the neighborhoods and parks along the reservoir and Pelahatchie Bay, northeast of Jackson. The paved trail is wide and relatively smooth and flat, and the northern section in particular is popular with local joggers.

The trail picks up in the south from the end of the Spillway Road Multi-Use Trail and turns north, passing through the Timberlake Campground and up to the edge of Pelahatchie Shore Park, a lovely wooded recreation site along the shores of the freshwater bay. A spur along the way allows trail users access to Lakeshore Park and the Reservoir YMCA, providing even more recreation options
