When its 130 miles are completed, the Northeast Texas Trail will be the longest recreational trail in Texas and the fourth longest in the United States. Following former railroad corridors, the trail is being constructed in segments. The trail makes use of corridors railbanked for pedestrian, bicycle, and equestrian use.

Meandering through the scenic countryside of Northeast Texas, the trail stretches from Farmersville (East Dallas) through 19 rural towns and 7 counties to New Boston (West Texarkana). The trail links neighborhoods, schools, community facilities, recreation areas, open space and cultural/historical areas.

There are 17 segments totaling 102 miles:
