Running 1.5 miles between the Sorrento Valley COASTER Station and the University of California San Diego campus, this paved bike path provides an improved connection in San Diego's bike trail network. Now bicyclists can travel from Roselle Street to Voigt Drive while staying safely separated from vehicles.

Located on the west side of Interstate 5, the bike path is completely separated from the highway and is protected by steel guardrails. Often located at a distanced and lower level than the road, the path is lined with a variety of vegetation, including dense brush, that provide additional shelter from the noise of the traffic.

At the path's north end in Sorrento Valley, an electronic display shows information including the time and the
