Stanley to Redfish Lake Trail

Idaho

The Stanley to Redfish Lake Trail is a 4.6-mile trail running between the namesake areas of Idaho. It is a crushed stone path until it spits out at Redfish Lake Rd. This southern endpoint is part of the Redfish Lake Recreation Area, which offers nearby camping options and recreation amenities.

The Stanley to Redfish Lake Trail is a 4.6-mile trail running between the namesake areas of Idaho. It is a crushed stone path managed by the Forest Service. The trail is open to biking, hiking, and horseback riding.

E-bikes are not allowed on the trail.

About the Route

The trail leaves off from the southern edge of Stanley, located just adjacent to Pioneer Park. Immediately, trail users are treated to expansive views of the surrounding Sawtooth Valley and Sawtooth Mountains. The trail is largely rural, with only a few rural road crossings and the only stop along the route being the Sawtooth NRA Ranger Station. The trail continues through its wooded landscape
