

2025

TrailLink Unlimited

Guides

Ohlone Greenway
California

Ohlone Greenway California

The Ohlone Greenway waltzes through the Bay Area cities of Berkeley, Albany, and El Cerrito for 5.3 miles with its partner, Bay

The Ohlone Greenway waltzes through the Bay Area cities of Berkeley, Albany, and El Cerrito for 5.3 miles with its partner, Bay Area Rapid Transit (BART). Doubling as a commuter and recreation route through the urban setting, the trail is named for the Indigenous people who once lived throughout Central California's coastal areas.

The paved trail links several parks and community gardens, as well as business districts with opportunities for refreshments. The ever-present elevated BART tracks lead to three stations, where bicyclists and walkers can board trains to destinations anywhere on the 130-mile system.

The greenway right-of-way dates back to the 1880s, when it was a transportation corridor for several railroads. One of these, the Key System, rolled through Berkeley to the San Francisco Bay ferry crossing in Emeryville. Separately, the California & Mt. Diablo Railroad ran through the corridor on narrow-gauge tracks laid in the 1880s. Eventually, the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway (often referred to as Santa Fe) gained control in 1903 and widened the tracks to handle commonly sized freight cars running between Richmond and Oakland. Santa Fe stopped using the tracks in the late 1970s.

The trail starts in the south at linear Ohlone Park, which is situated along four blocks of Hearst Avenue, in one of Berkeley's oldest neighborhoods, within a half mile of the University of California, Berkeley's campus. Initially slated for apartments in the incendiary late 1960s, the space was turned over to the city after activists planted sod and trees and set up camp in protest. You'll find an off-leash dog park (one of the nation's first), exercise equipment, a playground, and a community garden here.

The North Berkeley BART station complex interrupts the greenway after a half mile at Sacramento Street. To reach the off-road trail again, take Delaware Street one block west, turn north on Acton Street, go one block, and return to the trail at the northwest corner of Virginia and Acton Streets. (Separated bike lanes to connect the trail segments are scheduled to be installed through the BART complex by mid-2023.)

The greenway continues through neighborhoods and commercial areas in a northwesterly direction. Unlike the BART tracks passing overhead, the greenway is impeded by stops at frequent major street crossings. You'll find eateries and shopping at the Solano Avenue intersection in Albany, about 1.3 miles north of Berkeley.

After passing through Albany, the greenway arrives at the El Cerrito Plaza BART station in about a mile. It's another 2 miles through commercial and residential areas to the El Cerrito

Ohlone Greenway

California

States: California

Counties: Alameda, Contra Costa

Length: 5.3 miles

Trail end points: Martin Luther King, Jr. Way at Hearst Ave (Berkeley) to Richmond Greenway & San Pablo Ave, 190 feet north of Ohio St (El Cerrito)

Trail surfaces: Asphalt

Trail category: Rail-Trail

Trail activities: Bike, Inline

Skating, Wheelchair Accessible, Walking

Parking & Trail Access

Parking is available at BART stations along the route. Fees are charged Monday–Friday, 4am–3pm. Parking is free on weekends and BART holidays. Refer to the BART parking guide for more information.

Street parking is available in Berkeley/Albany on Masonic Avenue, between Santa Fe Avenue and Brighton Avenue.

Visit the TrailLink map for exact locations and detailed directions.

TrailLink
by Rails-to-Trails Conservancy

TrailLink.com

Ohlone Greenway

California

Trailhead

Restroom

Parking

Water Fountain

Tunnel

TrailLink
by Rails-to-Trails Conservancy

TrailLink.com