Widely regarded as Tampa Bay's best urban trail, the Upper Tampa Bay Trail provides a scenic escape from its congested surroundings. The nearly 14-mile trail exists in two separate sections and is paved along the entire route.

About the Route

The northern endpoint of the Upper Tampa Bay Trail is located along W Lutz Lake Farm Rd where the Suncoast Trail leaves off. This section of the trail entirely skirts the Brooker Creek Headwaters Nature Preserve. After it turns off from W Lutz Lake Farm Rd. It heads south as it borders the preserve, cutting in between dense wooded shrubbery and open grasslands until it reaches a southern endpoint at Van Dyke Rd.

Just a few miles away, the trail restarts at Peterson Park. From this trailhead, the first mile leads through a rural landscape past grazing cattle, sheep, and other livestock. At Ehrlich Road, the landscape turns suburban with restaurants and retail options aplenty. Next, the trail crosses over the busy Gunn Highway on a beautifully constructed pedestrian bridge.

The route then diverts from the original railroad corridor and takes a sharp right along the Channel A waterway, lined with native vegetation and beautiful cypress trees. Shortly after, the trail crosses a lovely wooden bridge over peaceful Rocky Creek.

The trail continues to follow the west bank of Rocky Creek as it passes the Water's Ave Trailhead. Beyond, the trail crosses Waters Avenue and parallels Memorial Highway to the southernmost trailhead at Montague St.

Connections

At the trail's northern end, it connects to the Suncoast Trail.
