Fort Dodge Nature Trail

Iowa

The Fort Dodge Nature Trail begins at the city's Snell-Crawford Park and runs northeast for nearly 9 miles. The trail travels natural surface and is thus better suited for fat tire bikes. Motorized vehicles are prohibited on both trails.

Combined, the two trails are 5 miles long. Both occupy an abandoned Chicago and North Western railroad corridor.

The Fort Dodge Nature Trail begins at the city's Snell-Crawford Park and runs northeast for nearly 9 miles. The trail travels adjacent to overhead power lines and crosses a couple of bridges over Soldier Creek. Passing just out of sight of the residential part of the bustling manufacturing city of Fort Dodge, the trail offers a treasured sense of seclusion. As the trail winds farther north, it cuts through heavily wooded forest before entering open farmland and ending not far from Fort Dodge Regional Airport on rural County Highway D14. North of 170th St, there are nearly 4 miles of trail along a concrete path that cuts through flat farmlands that extend all the way north to Badger.

Directly at the southern end of the trail in Snell-Crawford Park, the Soldier Creek Nature Trail begins. While that trail is paved, the Fort Dodge Nature Trail has a more
