Easton Railsto-Trails Maryland

The Easton Rails-to-Trails runs between Dutchmans Lane in southern Easton, Maryland, and North Easton Park—a large sports parking is available. From here, the trail heads south into down Easton, which connects trail users to many attractions.

Spur trails of the main north-south route connect trail users to other parts of Easton. After a brief on-road route on East Earle Ave., the trail continues west from S Harrison St. This section of trail stops at Moton Park but another short section of trail picks back up at Easton Point Park and winds along the Taynard Branch. This section of the trail is also often called the Easton Villages Trail.

The Easton Rails-to-Trails runs between Dutchmans Lane in southern Easton, Maryland, and North Easton Park—a large sports complex for 2.5 miles. The trail opened in 1998 and has been a popular local amenity since that time.

About the Route

Because it runs directly through Easton's historic downtown, the trail provides great access for many of the town's residents to local stores and schools. An original railroad station also sits along the trail near its midpoint south of Goldsborough Street. The depot has been converted into a museum and visitors center.

The ideal place to start along the trail is at the North Easton Park and A. James Park Sports Complex, where
