Felch Grade Trail

Michigan

The Felch Grade Trail is a rough-surfaced route between the communities of Narenta and Felch in Michigan's Upper Peninsula.

The Felch Grade Trail is a rough-surfaced route between the communities of Narenta and Felch in Michigan's Upper Peninsula. For most of its length, the trail parallels State Route 69, but your awareness of the lightly-traveled road is masked by the vegetation that has grown since the corridor was abandoned in 1970. And, most likely, you will be surprised by the amazing number of white-tailed deer using the trail as a travel route.
