Overview

Paved and mostly flat, the 13.2-mile Huron Valley Trail links several suburban communities, parks, and a large recreation area while providing connections to a growing network of trails.

About the Route

Forming a lowercase y shape, the trail can be divided into three sections—northeast, west, and south—of fairly equal lengths. From the northeast to the south, the trail is flat and passes through wooded areas bordering residential neighborhoods and travels across creeks, past ponds, and along a surface street. The western branch features more hills and ends at the Island Lake State

Recreation Area, where it meets the Island Lake Pathway at Kent Lake Beach Road. The trail contains bumpy and potholed pavement in some sections, and some road crossings are gravel.

The trail's northeastern endpoint begins in Wixom. Trail users have a choice between accessing the trail via the Michigan Air Line Trail or at the edge of Lyon Oaks County Park. These two branches of the trail quickly join at the intersection of Old Plank Road and Pollman Drive. Flat, the trail passes fields of flowers and stands of trees and other foliage and periodically crosses wooden footbridges. Note for all trail users: Among several road crossings in the northeast branch, one requires extra vigilance. After crossing South Hill Road, the route heads southwest and cross a curved section of Pontiac Trail—a high-speed road. There is a crosswalk but no traffic light. Traffic from the west (to the right) comes around a blind curve just before the crossing. Use extra caution here.

Near the midpoint of the trail in New Hudson, trail users can choose to continue south toward Dixboro Road or turn right onto a western segment of trail toward the 4,000-acre Island Lake State Recreation Area. Heading west, the route passes strip malls and a former industrial park; here the trail surface is rocky and uneven and requires extra care to navigate. The western branch's western terminus is in inside the state recreation area at Kent Lake Beach Road, where it connects to the Island Lake Pathway. The popular park also offers canoeing, volleyball courts, picnic shelters, swimming, and cabin rentals.

The southern branch of the y is similar to the northeast branch, featuring wooded areas interspersed with suburban neighborhoods. Entering the city of South Lyon, the Huron Valley Trail overlaps a portion of the South Lyon city trail system. Signage—limited throughout—can be confusing in this area. At 10 Mile Road, the trail parallels Reynoldsweet Street a short distance toward McHattie Park, which has parking, restrooms, and a drinking fountain near the trail's
