From its northern end on W Fourth Street by Merschel Park (122 W 4th St, Winston-Salem), the Strollway threads through several engaging downtown blocks. It uses a sidewalk connector along Town Run Lane NW until crossing Second Street. At it passes Corpening Plaza, it runs along partially a closed one-way road until it crosses First Street, where it becomes an off-road pathway.

The Strollway crosses over Salem Parkway via a pedestrian bridge. As you approach the bridge, the cityscape gives way to green spaces, fragrant magnolias and residential neighborhoods.

Almost a mile south from the bridge, the Old Salem Museums & Garden (900 Old Salem Rd)—which includes the Old Salem Visitor Center—is next to the trail on the west side. The Old Salem Covered Bridge provides a connection to the restored Old Salem historic district. Cross the bridge to reach additional museums (924 S Main St) and to explore the historic district. Established in 1766 by Moravian craftsmen, it grew into a thriving trading center and reputable source of high-quality handicrafts. Today it's one of the country's most authentic and best documented colonial sites, boasting 100 restored and reconstructed buildings.

Continue south along the Strollway to W Salem Avenue, where there is a roughly 250ft section of widened sidewalk west along W Salem Avenue. The Strollway briefly continues south as an off-road pathway until it connects to the Salem Creek Greenway at its pedestrian bridge over the creek.

The intersection of S Main Street and Waughtown Street provides access to the southern end of the Strollway. From the intersection, follow a short section of the Greenway to the bridge and head north along the Strollway.

For a longer adventure, continue west along the Salem Creek Greenway through Washington Park for roughly a mile to reach the Greenway's western trailhead. Alternatively, continue east for about 4 miles to reach the scenic Salem Lake and the Greenway's eastern trailhead.
