Freedom Trail (OH)

Ohio

Northern Ohio's Freedom Trail currently offers more than 7 miles of tree-lined pathway along the former Freedom Secondary the Ohio & Erie Canalway Towpath Trail, a whopping 85-mile pathway the heads north through Cuyahoga Valley National Park to Cleveland, and south to Bolivar.

Northern Ohio's Freedom Trail currently offers more than 7 miles of tree-lined pathway along the former Freedom Secondary Railroad. From Eastwood Avenue in eastern Akron, the paved trail follows a northeastern course, winding through Tallmadge, and heading up to the Summit/Portage County Line on the outskirts of Kent. On your journey, watch for bald eagles, coyote, and white-tailed deer.

The Freedom Trail ends at Middlebury Avenue, about 3 miles shy of the Portage Hike and Bike Trail, which continues eastward more than 9 miles from Kent (not far from Kent State University) to Ravenna.

On its other end, extends into downtown Akron near the University of Akron campus, putting it just blocks from
