Brian Brown Memorial Greenway

Tennessee

The Brian Brown Memorial Greenway—named for a local trail advocate whose untimely death while biking on a busy road

The Brian Brown Memorial Greenway—named for a local trail advocate whose untimely death while biking on a busy road emphasized the need for trails in the area—runs for 1.66-miles on the western side of Martin. The trail courses primarily through farmland owned by the University of Tennessee at Martin, with the eastern stretch occupying a former railroad corridor.

The paved trail extends eastward on the out-of-service rail line to downtown Martin.
