The Twin Cities Rail Trail is a 4-mile multi-use trail that connects downtown Fitchburg and downtown Leominster, offering a variety

Nashua River, even running close beside it for stretches at a time. Much of the trail is lined with trees, and just before crossing the border from Fitchburg to Leominster, it passes over a small brook via a pedestrian bridge.

The Twin Cities Rail Trail is a 4-mile multi-use trail that connects downtown Fitchburg and downtown Leominster, offering a variety of recreational opportunities and providing an alternative transportation route for residents and visitors alike.

From 1st St in Fitchburg to Carter Park in Leominster, this 12-foot-wide paved path runs 4 miles through residential areas. It passes by multiple parks and playgrounds, local businesses, and the Fitchburg Municipal Airport.

At the trail's northern end in Fitchburg, the route briefly makes use of sidewalks running along 4th Street, Middle Street, and 1st Street.

For most of the route, the trail parallels the winding North
