Luzerne County National Recreation Trail

Pennsylvania

Tracing nearly two miles of riverfront, the Luzerne County National Recreation Trail (also known as the Luzerne County Rail Trail)

Tracing nearly two miles of riverfront, the Luzerne County National Recreation Trail (also known as the Luzerne County Rail Trail) will eventually form a 16-mile pathway along an active railway. Chain link fencing separates the tracks from the trail.

In downtown Pittston, the flat rail-trail intersects with a path to the water's edge. The trail is straight as an arrow, with markers every 0.1 mile. You'll have the active railroad on one side, with trees and Susquehanna River views in the background. On the other side, most of the corridor looks like a well-maintained lawn. The trail ends at a gravel parking lot, but continue another 0.1 mile to see the railway tunnel.
