The Cedar Prairie Trail is an important component of the extensive trail system in Cedar Falls, Iowa. The paved pathway runs between the South Riverside Trail at Waterloo Road and the Sergeant Road Trail along Sergeant Road/US 63, just north of Shaulis Road (south of Cedar Falls). Near its midpoint, the trail connects to the Greenhill Trail and the Prairie Lakes Trail, providing further opportunities to explore and allowing you to do a loop around the area via trail. The trail travels over gently rolling hills and past a few suburban neighborhoods and light industrial areas before entering the lushly wooded Black Hawk Creek corridor. The Cedar Prairie Trail enables cyclists and pedestrians to travel through the beautiful Iowa landscape from the heart of Cedar Falls to the rural outskirts of town, where even more trails await to allow you to continue your journey.
