

2025

TrailLink Unlimited

Guides

Jack
Harrington
White Plains
Greenway
New York

Jack Harrington White Plains Greenway

New York

The Jack Harrington White Plains Greenway's name reflects the honorific for a long-time member of the city's conservation board.

The Jack Harrington White Plains Greenway's name reflects the honorific for a long-time member of the city's conservation board. The trail's corridor follows the former New York, Westchester & Boston Railway right-of-way, extending from a City parking lot at Mamaroneck Avenue opposite Bloomingdale Road to the Scarsdale border.

The trail leaves in the north at the intersection of Gedney Way and Pleasant Avenue, where there is a large brown sign with yellow lettering. From Gedney Way, the usable trail heads south, adjacent to the DPW facility and residential neighborhoods. The trail is 0.8 miles long between Gedney Way and Ridgeway. From Ridgeway to the Scarsdale border, the trail is 0.5 miles long, ending at a small swamp.

TrailLink
by Rails-to-Trails Conservancy

TrailLink.com

Jack Harrington White Plains Greenway

New York

States: New York

Counties: Westchester

Length: 1.2miles

Trail end points: Gedney Way to Near Reynal
Crossing

Trail surfaces: Woodchips

Trail category: Rail-Trail

Trail activities: Walking,Cross Country Skiing

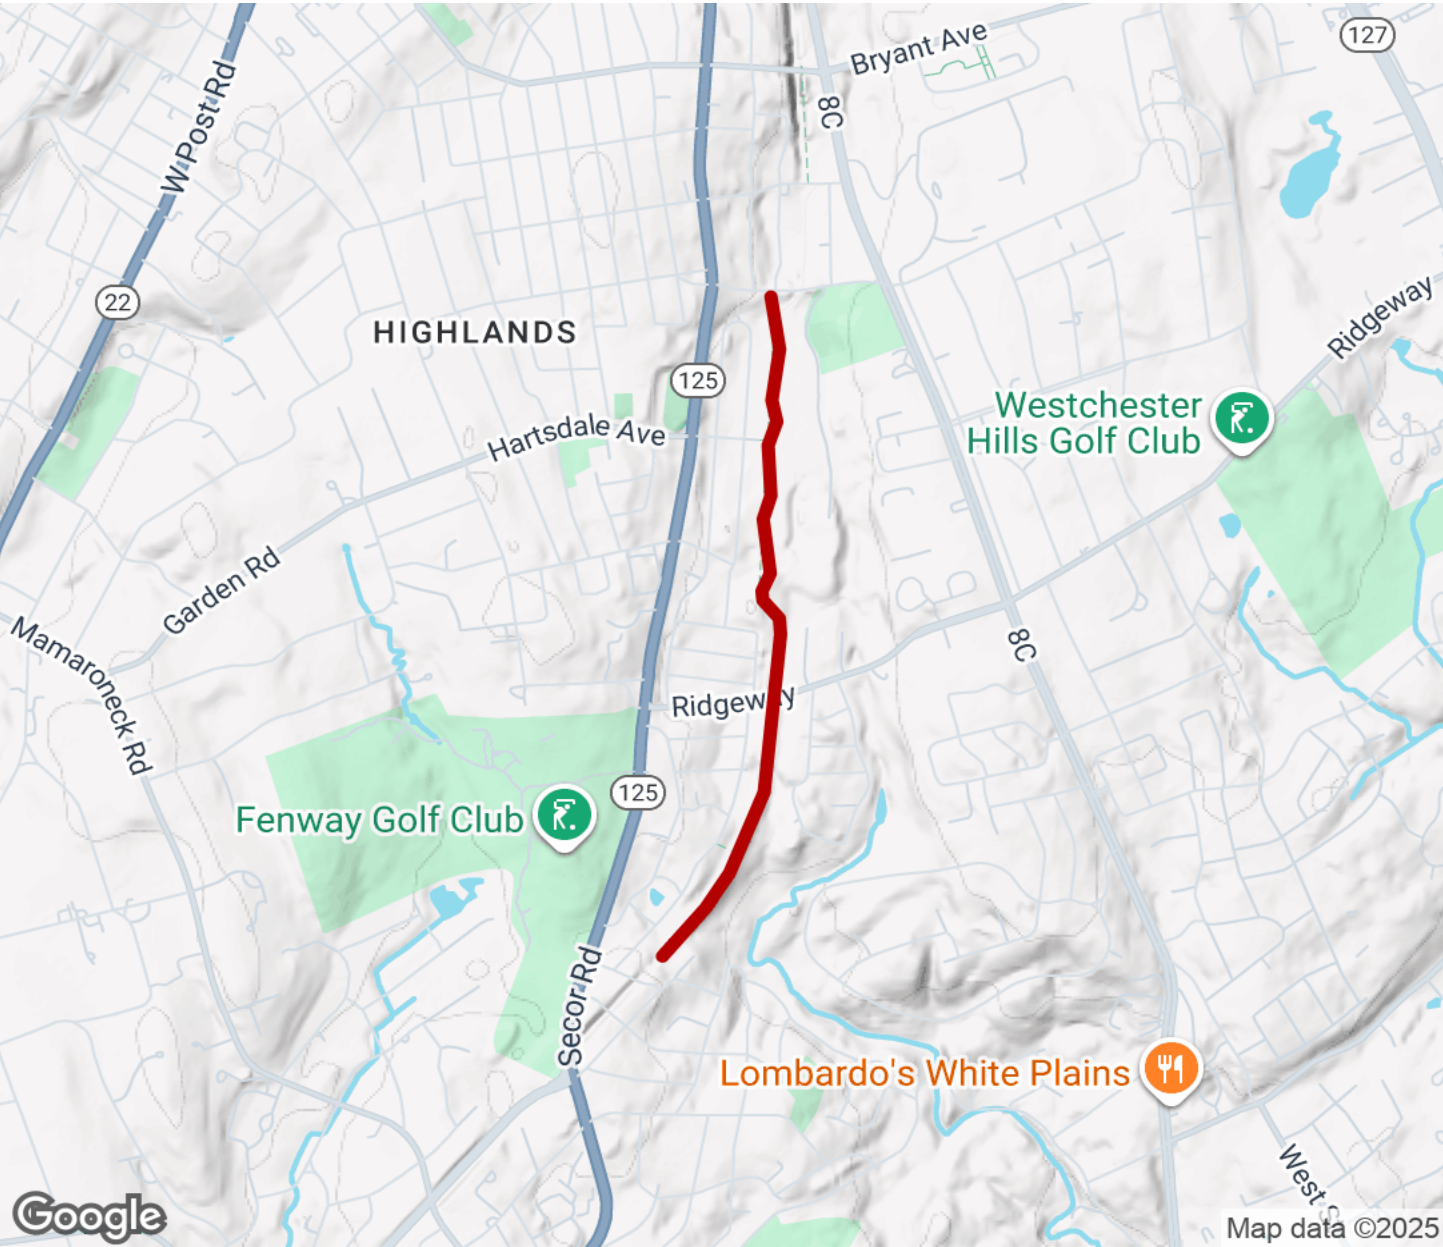

Parking & Trail Access

Parking near the trail can be found in Gillie Park at the corner of Mamaroneck Avenue and Gedney Way in White Plains.

Jack Harrington White Plains Greenway

New York

-  Trailhead
-  Restroom
-  Parking
-  Water Fountain
-  Tunnel