Blue River Trail (IN)

Indiana

Columbia City's Blue River Trail weaves throughout the small city along the banks of the Eel River, linking residents with schools, baseball fields and mountain bike trails. At the park's north end, the trail makes a loop around a quiet pond.

The trail connects residents of the northern neighborhoods of Columbia City with Morsches Park via a bridge over the river north of US 30.

Columbia City's Blue River Trail weaves throughout the small city along the banks of the Eel River, linking residents with schools, businesses, activity hubs and parks. The main trailhead, which offers a bike rack, parking, drinking fountain, benches and restrooms, is located just north of the Columbia City Fire Museum on S. Whitley Street, although a recent extension to the west of there takes trail users to S. Main Street/US 30.

The trail meanders east from the trailhead along the waterway until it crosses the river on a footbridge at the YMCA property. At E. Van Buren Street/State Route 205, trail users must cross the river on the road bridge. The trail resumes immediately after the bridge, and extends north to popular Morsches Park. The 117-acre park contains a splash pad, pavilion, skate park, tennis courts,
