repurposed railcars, and scenic views of Sauk Mountain and other Cascade Range Peaks. The nearby river provides great fishing access and nice river views. The eastern endpoint of the Cascade Trail is at the Concrete Community Center in Concrete.

The Cascade Trail runs for nearly 23 miles between Sedro-Woolley and Concrete and follows the Skagit River as it parallels State Route 20 into the Cascade foothills of northwest Washington. The crushed-stone pathway runs through cultivated fields, open space, scattered woodlands, and river bottoms.

About the Route

The Cascade Trail's western endpoint is in Sedro-Woolley at the Fruitdale Road intersection. Heading east, the trail is paved for about a mile before turning into a crushed stone footing. The trail offers a mix of traveling through open spaces, tree-lined areas, and downtowns.

The Cascade boasts 23 trestles and two bridges made from
