The aptly named Creekside Trail travels for 15.8 miles between Dayton and Xenia and follows a nature-filled corridor offering many opportunities for side exploration. Because the trail parallels two streams much of the way, there are also spots to cool off on hot summer days.

About the Route

The trail's western endpoint is located in the popular Eastwood Metropark, which presents endless opportunities for recreation, including boating, fishing, hiking, paddling, and more. As the trail heads south, it passes the busy Airway Rd. where trail users can see the shiny silver hangars of the National Museum of the U.S. Air Force.

Soon after, the trail takes a drastic turn at the T-junction, the trail continues due east. After around 5 miles, the route crosses I-675 via a very impressive 465-ft restored railroad overpass and then shortly after, the trail passes Fifth Third Gateway Park.

The trail crosses Beavercreek Station, which features the September 11th Memorial of Miami Valley. The nearby E.J. Nutter Park offers baseball diamonds, restrooms, water, parking, and concession stands (open only during games).

As the trail continues towards its eastern endpoint in Xenia, the trail passes the Beavercreek Community Park, William Maxwell Rest Area, and Sol Arnovitz Park. Xenia, where the trail reaches its eastern endpoint, there is a replica railroad depot and museum dedicated to the town's railroad history as well as restrooms and water fountains.

Connections

At the trail's western endpoint in Dayton, it connects to the Mad River Trail.

On the eastern side of Dayton, the trail intersects with the Iron Horse Trail.

In Xenia, the Creekside Trail connects to the Xenia-Jamestown Connector, Little Miami Scenic Trail, Prairie Grass Trail, Towler Road Spur, and the James Ranch Connecting Spur.

The Creekside Trail is part of the Great American Rail Trail, a 3,700-mile route from Washington to Washington D.C.
