I-275 Metro Trail

Michigan

I-275 Metro Trail

Michigan

The I-275 Metro Trail began back in the 1970s as the Michigan Department of Transportation's response to the then-fuel crisis.

Connections

Along Hines Drive in Plymouth Township, trail users can connect to the Rouge River Gateway Greenway.

Just north of Michigan Avenue in Canton, trail users can also connect to the 4-mile Lower Rouge River Recreation Trail.

Farther south, a link to the Wayne County Metroparks Trail allows trail users to visit the Lower Huron, Willow, and Oakwoods Metroparks.

The I-275 Metro Trail began back in the 1970s as the Michigan Department of Transportation's response to the then-fuel crisis. The original trail linked Wayne, Oakland, and Monroe counties along a paved route that ran parallel to Interstate 275.

About the Route

The trail was ahead of its time, but construction standards were not up to the standards of today's pedestrian and bike trails, and the path fell into disrepair. However, thanks to the efforts of MI DOT, along with volunteers, planners, and recreation enthusiasts, the I-275 Metro Trail is now alive and well. The new and improved paved path runs between Novi in the north and New Boston in the south.
