The Hanover Trolley Trail is currently 7.5 miles in two disconnected trail segments. The trail is being built along the 16-mile corridor of the York-Hanover Trolley Line that ran between the two cities in the early 1900s and along the abandoned Genesee & Wyoming rail line.

Running through the Borough of Spring Grove and the western outskirts of the City of York, the northern section is shaped like a somewhat like wishbone. Following the original trolley line, the north branch of the wishbone runs northeast from the East Constitution Trailhead to Martin Road. This 1.4-mile section has a crushed limestone surface and there is another trailhead mid-route on Hershey Road.

Following the abandoned Genesee & Wyoming rail line, the southern stem of the wishbone heads northeast from the intersection of East Railroad Street & South Main St (also known as Route 116 or Hanover Road) to just south of the bridge over Sunnyside Road. This 2.5-mile paved portion of trail intersects with the northern branch just east of the East Constitution Trailhead. By providing pedestrians and bicyclists with an alternative to busy roads and traffic, this trail segment offers a safe route to and from the center of town.

Running through Hanover, the southern section heads northeast from Moul Field and extends for 3.3 miles to Jacobs Mill Road. This section is hard-packed gravel.
