El Rio Trail

Florida

Notice: At Spanish River Blvd./40th St. there is a detour in place at the crosswalk. See Boca Raton Parks and Rec for more current

The northernmost endpoint of the trail is located just below the Delray Oaks Natural Area, a 25-acre Park with a small wetland.

From here, the trail heads south along the canal, which passes through a small industrial area. After crossing Yamoto Rd., there is a very brief 0.11-mile rail-with-trail section alongside the Boca Raton Tri-Rail Station, and then the trail heads south from here.

The last portion of the trail parallels Florida Atlantic University's (FAU) Campus and provides students with car-free mobility on- and off-campus.

Watch for turtles, great blue herons, owls, butterflies and iguanas along the canal. Additionally, fishing is allowed on the canal.

Connections

At the trail's southern end, it connects to the Glades Road Path.

Overview

El Rio Trail runs for just over 5 paved miles through Boca Raton and Delray Beach alongside a canal of the same name.

About the Route

Throughout its route, El Rio Trail provides a respite from the sprawling urban development of the Boca Raton region and takes users along a shaded, asphalt path.
