The Roberts Pass Trail runs from downtown London, Ohio, to rural Fairfield Township. The trail passes through farmland for 6.5 miles, although dense tree cover shades the route at all times.

Although the trail might not offer varied scenery, it is an integral part of the planned Ohio to Erie Trail, a 320-mile route stretching from the shores of Lake Erie in Cleveland to the Ohio River in Cincinnati. Over 240 miles of the trail are currently complete and open for use. Two other components of the larger trail system also link to the Roberts Pass Trail; in the west, the Prairie Grass Trail continues south to Xenia after a short gap in London, while in the east, the Camp Chase Trail takes trail users to Georgesville and beyond.
