The S-Line Urban Greenway was Jacksonville's first dedicated urban path. Following a former CSX railroad route, the rail-trail connects the neighborhoods of New Town, Durkeeville, Springfield and Brentwood. Along the way, trail users can enjoy pollinator gardens, native plants and views of Long Branch Creek. On its northern end, the trail is anchored by the commercial hub of Gateway Town Center.

The trail is also part of the developing 30-mile Emerald Trail network, which will connect the city's historic urban neighborhoods to downtown, schools, parks and other amenities.
