National Road Heritage Trail (Henry County)

Indiana

The Henry County segment of the National Road Heritage Trail runs for 8 miles over two segments. One runs from Big Blue River in the National Road Heritage Trail. Through Indianapolis and Greenfield it's part of the Pennsy Trail. In Hendricks and Putnam counties, the route is called the Vandalia Trail.

The Henry County segment of the National Road Heritage Trail runs for 8 miles over two segments. One runs from Big Blue River in Raysville east to SR 3 west of Dunreith (4 miles); the other between S County Road 225 W east to Williams Street in Lewisville (4.2 miles). The trail traverses a mostly rural landscape with access to the three towns.

The National Road Heritage Trail is part of a proposed border-to-border trail, stretching between Terre Haute and Richmond, Indiana, which will eventually span more than 150 miles. The trail occupies part of the former Pennsylvania Railroad corridor, which closely parallels the Historic National Road.

Another segment of the trail passes through Terre Haute. In Greencastle the People Pathways forms a segment of
