Cape Fear River Trail

North Carolina

Overview The Cape Fear River Trail winds for 7 miles through a mix of woodlands and marshes on Fayetteville's north side, offering recreational gem offering both educational displays and live animals (snakes, turtles, and alligators!). Here, visitors can go on guided walks with rangers and naturalists, stop for a picnic, or simply enjoy the views (including a waterfall). There's a primitive campground, too (overnight stays are permitted, but there is no electricity and only cold showers). The park's trailhead was named in honor of Moses Mathis, known locally as the "Bicycle Man" for his two decades of work running youth enrichment programs, including providing bikes to children in need; a memorial plaque allows visitors the opportunity to learn more about this inspirational person.

Connections

The Cape Fear River Trail is part of the developing East Coast Greenway, a 3,000-mile route between Florida and Maine.

Overview

The Cape Fear River Trail winds for 7 miles through a mix of woodlands and marshes on Fayetteville's north side, offering stunning views of the Cape Fear River.

About the Route

The trail is relatively flat but with some hills. Trail users will encounter boardwalks and bridges, even one covered bridge. Wildlife abounds here: frogs, lizards, and deer are all common sights. Interpretive signage educates trail users about the local flora and fauna, including more than 700 species of plant and tree and 150 species of bird.

At its southern end is Clark Park Nature Center, a
