After running through the dense neighborhood of West Irvine, the West Irvine Trail ends at Valencia Park, where it dives under Jamboree Road and becomes the Peters Canyon Bikeway in Tustin. Continue on that trail for a much longer journey north to Peters Canyon Regional Park.

To the trail user, the West Irvine Trail and Peters Canyon Bikeway are one continuous trail with two names in three cities. The northern component of the Peters Canyon Regional Trail, both paths feature a blacktop lane for cyclists and a decomposed granite track for joggers and equestrians. Together, they join Irvine's Peters Canyon Trail to popular Peters Canyon Regional Park on the Tustin–Orange border.

The West Irvine Trail starts on Bryan Avenue at the bridge over State Route 261. Cross the bridge on its sidewalk to reach the Peters Canyon Trail—not to be confused with Tustin's Peters Canyon Bikeway farther north—which heads both north and south along its namesake wash.
