The eastern end of the trail is marked by the confluence of Brays Bayou and Buffalo Bayou, as well as the nearby Mason Park.

Connections

The Brays Bayou Connector Trail meets the main trail in Authur Storey Park.

In South Central Houston, the trail meets the Columbia Tap Rail Trail.

The Brays Bayou Greenway Trail winds along its namesake bayou in southwestern Houston for over 47 miles, connecting neighborhoods, universities, recreational facilities, and cultural attractions.

About the Route

The trail leaves off from its western endpoint just short of George Bush Park, in the Howelville neighborhood. The trail travels east from here, first passing an artificial pond, that is part of the large Bray's Bayou. As the trail continues east, notable sites include Authur Storey Park and Braeburn Country Club.

Roughly mid-trail, Hermann Park offers trail-goers access to the Houston Zoo, beautiful gardens, and the city's
