The Fred Meijer M-6 Trail runs for 9 miles, paralleling Michigan Highway 6/Paul B. Henry Expressway south of Grand Rapids (a.k.a. the M-6). As such, it's not the quietest of trails, but it still offers a great alternative to driving. The paved trail alternates from running along both the south and north sides of the freeway. To get around the cloverleaf interchange that links M-6 and US 131, the trail utilizes the sidewalk along 68th Street between Clay Avenue and Clyde Park Avenue - bridges and pathway installed in 2019 help provide an easy means across the barriers formed by the railroad tracks and Buck Creek. Use extreme caution at all road crossings, as motorists are not always aware of pedestrians using the trail.

The Fred Meijer M-6 Trail connects the Paul Henry-Thornapple Trail in the east to the Kent Trails system in
