creek to Avila Beach. The western end of the trail is at Avila Beach Park. The trail is scenic and offers a variety to see and do along the way. Cyclists can loop back on Avila Beach Drive, which has wide shoulders.

The San Luis Obispo segment is a 1.3-mile runs between Los Osos Valley Rd and Prado Rd in San Luis Obispo. There are footbridges at both ends of this trail segment.

There are plans to close the 4.5 mile gap between the segments.

The Bob Jones City to the Sea Bike Trail is currently in two segments totaling 3.9 miles in Avila Beach and San Luis Obispo. The rail-trail is a City to the Sea trail that follows the San Luis Obispo Creek along the former Pacific Coast Railroad right-of-way.

About the Route

The Avila Beach 2.6-mile segment is a short but delightful ride down to the ocean along San Luis Obispo Creek. This segment runs between Avila Beach Park (Avila Beach) and 7009 Ontario Rd (San Luis Obispo). Starting at eastern end at the Ontario Road park-and-ride lot, the trail traverses a rocky hillside covered in mature oaks, passes a vineyard and two private communities, takes to a private road along the creek then crosses a golf course and the
