The Napa Valley Vine Trail will one day connect Calistoga to the Vallejo ferry terminal, with a total distance of 47 miles. The trail roughly parallels State Route 29, a popular wine route, and the valley's main transportation corridor. The trail will allow visitors and locals the chance to hop on a bike, walk, or jog through the beautiful wine-growing region.

Currently, 33 miles of the trail are completed and paved in disconnected segments in several communities along the route (from north to south): Calistoga, St. Helena, Yountville, Napa, American Canyon, and Vallejo.

About the Route

The northernmost segment runs 8.2 miles between

Calistoga and St. Helena. This section's northern end begins at Washington Street in Calistoga and follows the former Southern Pacific rail line for the first mile. Largely following alongside Rte. 29, the trail runs through the rolling fields of the Napa Valley. This section also passes Napa Valley State Park, before reaching its southern end along Pratt Ave in St. Helena.

The next section of the trail is situated in downtown Yountville and is called locally the "Yountville Mile," even though it's just shy of a mile. This section of the trail links Madison Street to California Drive and offers scenic views of the Napa Valley hills.

A 6-mile addition to the trail through Oak Knoll (between Yountville and Napa) has been constructed and is open for use.

In Napa, a section of the trail leaves off from the north at Solano Avenue (south of Redwood Road), where trail users can find a few restaurants. From there, the trail heads southeast along the Napa Valley Wine Train tracks through residential and light industrial areas. South of downtown Napa, the trail continues along Soscal Avenue and dives under busy W. Imola Avenue/SR 121 and through John F. Kennedy Memorial Park. The park spans 350 acres and includes picnic tables, athletic fields, a golf course, a playground, and a boat launch. Two additional pieces of trail—each roughly a quarter-mile long—can be found south of the city: the first winds close to the Napa River, passing under SR 12/29, while the second parallels Devlin Road, near the airport.

A half-mile of trail is available in American Canyon. It winds through Veterans Memorial Park, a 14-acre open space with benches and a playground. Another segment is open in American Canyon and the quarter-mile concrete pathway will run from the Vintage Ranch subdivision, past Canyon Oaks Elementary School, and to Newell Drive, where trail users can pick up a multi-use trail that leads to the Newell Open Space
