White River Wapahani Trail

Indiana

The White River Wapahani Trail is nearly 7 miles long, stretching from 38th Street at Riverside Regional Park south to W. Raymond with public art and numerous attractions. On the other end of town, trail users can also access the Monon Trail via the Towpath or a crosstown connection on St. Clair Street.

The White River Wapahani Trail is nearly 7 miles long, stretching from 38th Street at Riverside Regional Park south to W. Raymond Street. Near downtown Indianapolis, the trail provides access to White River State Park and the Indianapolis Zoo. With several more miles planned, it will eventually connect to a number of other trails.

Currently, it links with the Central Canal Towpath and the southern segment of the Fall Creek Trail. In the future, it will connect to the Eagle Creek Trail and the Pleasant Run Trail.

Downtown, trail-goers can easily reach the Indianapolis Cultural Trail at Washington Street, which stretches 8 miles through the city and spans five cultural districts
