Penitencia Creek Trail

California

The Penitencia Creek Trail follows its namesake creek through a suburban greenbelt in northeast San José. On the northeastern end, injured and sick wild animals. About 1.5 miles up Penitencia Road is Alum Rock Park, worth a visit.

Use caution at all road crossings.

The Penitencia Creek Trail follows its namesake creek through a suburban greenbelt in northeast San José. On the northeastern end, the trail passes by a series of percolation ponds, and you can take a side trip along dirt paths around them. Much of the rest of the trail is paved, although midway along the trail you come to Berryessa Park, which has a 1-mile-long paved loop, children's playground, restrooms, water fountain, community center and a fenced-off duck pond (please don't feed the birds). Berryessa Park is adjacent to Piedmont Middle School, where you'll find a track and a ball field.

Penitencia Creek, which is shaded and beautiful, is the southern border of Berryessa Park. Inside the south end of Berryessa Park, about 30 feet from the creek, is the Wildlife Center of Silicon Valley, which rehabilitates
