The Miners Ravine Trail winds its way through the city of Roseville, following the course of Miners Ravine and Dry Creek through a wooded greenway and among suburban neighborhoods and business districts, including Downtown Roseville. The trail extends between Sierra College Boulevard and Darling Way, with a break in the trail between Folsom Road and Royer Park. There are plans to complete a trail in this portion but for now the gap is easily bridged on-road by following Linda Drive, Lincoln Street, Park Drive and Deitrich Drive. The trail provides easy access between downtown Roseville and Miners Ravine Preserve.
