Coursing alongside one of Stockton's levees, the Calaveras River Bike Trail services many neighborhoods and provides access to many amenities in the San Joaquin Valley city. The east-west corridor connects many educational institutions, including local neighborhood schools, Stagg High School, University of the Pacific and San Joaquin Delta College.

While paved, surface conditions can be affected by rain and sediment deposition on the trail surface. University of Pacific students annually conduct service days to clean the trail surrounding their campus, ensuring a quality experience in the central portion of the trail.
